

Llanarthne Minimus

Purpose

Llanarthne is a little method which can be rung by bands who wish to practise Stedman singles.

The hunt bell is not the treble, it is the third.

Third place bell rings a slow course pattern which may be a new concept.

The other bells repeatedly treble bob on the front, this may be a new skill.

There are no treble signposts as the treble is a working bell.

Ringing Llanarthne Minimus

Third place bell rings a slow course, making alternate places in 3-4.

The other bells plain hunt.

On reaching the front, each bell treble bobs – dodge, lead and dodge again in 1-2.

Jargon

Treble bobbing, sometimes known as treble bob hunting describes the path of a bell that dodges once in every position, up and down.

Slow course bell is a bell which does repeated work separate from the other working bells.
